Very severely crossexamined was Mr. Bingley, as to a long correspondence he had had with Mr. Holmes, and as to the somewhat active part he appeared to have taken in getting up the case; whilst incidentally Mr. Hawkins did not lorget to suggest that the knowledge which the defondant had isplayed of Santiago and been produced al second hand from a gazetteer, and to carefully bring once again before the jury, in outline, as it were, the leading facts of the celebrated Chili commission. "Did you," was his last question, "receive on the 7th of November, 1868, a letter from Mr. Holmes, in which be says, 'I heard The lighthouse broad on the starboard this week by the Oneida that Sir Roger Tichborne arrived safely at Rio de Janeiro in verv answer: "I did." And to those who remember the story of the Chili commission, and of the Claimant's attempt to cross the continent from Rio, instead of going round by the Cape, the question was not without its significance.

Mr. Bingley's cross-examination, amounting as it in effect did, to an episodical address to the jury by Mr. Hawkins upon the Chili commission and its incidents, took some little time. At its conclusion there stepped into the box one Mr. William Cline, a mariner, who, in answer to Dr. Kenealy's question, briskly deposed that he had served on board the John Bibby, under Ouptain Oates, and that in 1854 the John Bibbu was lying in Rio de Janeiro barbour, in company with the ill-fated Bella. He remembered a young Englishman whom he had seen in the company of Captain Oates, of the John Bibbu. and of Captain Birkett, of the Bella, and who was somewhat more fond of sherry and bottled ale than was exactly good for him. The description given by Mr. Cline of this same young Englishman" was, in effect, a sufintently accurate description of Roger Treaporne, and full effect was given to it when Dr. Kencaly asked, "Do you see him now?" and received the prompt reply. "Yes; I do. There he is." Mr. Cline's cross-examination will hardly be found interesting, will the points in it be sufficiently apparent, unless the reader will refe for himself to the evidence of Captain Oates, given in behalf of the prosecution on the 23rd of May last, and compare it, question for mostion, with the evidence given yesterday. Incidentally, it is a little amusing, as showing the inordinate length of this monstrous cause colobre, to find that Mr. Cline first read Captain Oates's evidence in some English papers which had been sent out to the West Indies, and that on reading it he resolved, should be reach England before the trial was over, to supplement the testimony of his superior officer by his own. To Mr. Cline succeeded Mr. William Robinson, an old Carabineer, whose evidence in chief and whose cross-examination were of the usual Carabineer type, save that Mr. seen Roger's arms stripped when the officers and men were playing skittles together at been any tattoo-marks on his arms, he must have seen them. After lunch the four hundred and first witness in this gigantic case stepped into the box. Mr. Benjamin Ward was the gentleman's name; and, whatever may be said of him when Mr. Hawkins makes his reply, be will hardly be accused of any obtrusive reversuce for the Bench. Indeed, his tone was that of a witness who, knowing his own strength, has 'whitewashed Yankce '?" "I never have, I course, in each case followed by the now conventional "roars of laughter." Much, however, that the ex-Australian had to tell the jury was for those who are interested in the "Australian part of the case," neouliarly valuable, Mr. Ward had seen Arthur Orton pick up a six--he had been a mate of the luckless Ballarat Harry; he had seen and known the mysterious Mr. Toke; and he had been present when the with all the brisk freshness of a smart southant as Arthur Orton was, at any rate, not deficient in energy. "He's not a hittom like Orton," cried Mr. Word, pointing to the defeudant. "I wish Orton was vere now. You'd soon see if I knew him. I could pick him out in court out o' fifty thousand." But the witness who succeeded to Mr. Ward

They plundered the Consul and the British merchants, and imprisoned three of them who resisted the outrage. Mr. Debret, the Consul, had lo seek safety in Belize. The Niebe was then about seven miles from Omao, and on Captain Lorraine receiving intelligence of the occurrence he immediately proceeded to the seeme of the outrage for the protection of the British flag. On the 19th of August, on reaching Omao, the Niebe was brought into position, and satisfaction was demanded of the authorities, which not being given, the susign was run up the mainmast nd a blank shot fired. This was returned from the fort. An active cannonade then ensued, which lasted from three to six o'clock in the afternoon. It was renewed the next day. After two or three hours, the fort being silenced, a this of truce was sent on board. The uffair was QUEENSLAND WOOL TARTAN arranged by the release of the imprisoned Bris tish subjects and the payment of an indemnity of £30,000. The enemy had several killed and wounded.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL'S JAABILITY.

At the Heslingden County Court, Mr. W. A. Hulton, Judge, delivered judgment in an action brought against the Postmaster-General for alleged damage in consequence of the destruction of a telegram A plaintiff named Overstall SASH RIBBONS, 9 inches wide, all of th had sent a telegram to a tradesman at Barrowin-Furness to meet him at Preston, instead of at Lammster, as previously agreed upon. The boy intrusted with the message, finding the man to whom it was addressed away from his place of business, destroyed the telegram. In consequence of this, the parties did not meet, and plaintiff claimed 16s. as damages. Mr. LACE, Polding, of Blackburn, who appeared for the Postmaster-General, objected that the defendant was not responsible for the acts of his servante, and that a month's notice of action should have been given. His Honour gavejudgment for the defendant, on the ground that the Rostmaster-General was not responsible for the negligence of his subordinate officers, and quoted Lord Mansfield in the case of "Whitfield v. Lord de Dispencer," where his Lordship LINEN and COTTON SHEETING: declared that the Postmaster-General, in respect of being non-liable for the acts of his subordinates was on an equal footing with the other great officers of the State, such as the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, who "were The above GOODS have been carefully selected never thought liable for any negligence or misconduct of the inferior officers in their several departments." Other more recent cases were quoted in support, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay costs -Times.

MISCELLANEOUS. At a recent meeting of the Odontological Society, a patient was introduced, who, baving had a swollen check with suppuration, had been treated more than two years for scrofula. At LADIES' & CHILDREN'S OUTFITTERS, length he was seen by a member of the Society, who discovered decayed fangs of one of the teeth in the upper jaw; these were extracted, and in a fortnight the swelling abated, and the long-standing and disagreeeble wound in the cheek was healed. This is always the trying moment for a bashful man. This partioular one made his final bow and gracefully retired, facing his friends, to what he fondly imagined was the right door of exit. Alas! It led to an empty china closet, and he was inside and he shut that door before he quite realized his agonizing blunder. But even that might have been borne were it not that the family watch-dog had secretly crept there to dose. The intrusion burt his feelings, and he naturally and promptly resented it.
